

The fund collected for their purchase!"

The whole object of this extraordinary movement has "this intent no more;" to say their own words—"once for all, we say it, and we say it in the presence of the world, we have no senatorial election in 1857!" Will the people of Indiana believe the prevention of a senatorial election in 1857 is a sufficient moment, especially as they have a popular vote manifested their preference for the success of Democratic principles announced, to justify these Republican "servants" according to the extreme measure of "bloodying the wheels of government" to prevent that end? We think not. And we believe that a sufficient number of the Republican members of the next legislature will have honor enough and respect for the public will, and of the unmistakable sentiment of their own

There is just medium in this respect which avoids the extreme of extravagance on the one hand, and that of niggardliness on the other.

☞ The editor of the Terre Haute Express in a letter from this city, thus refers to the condition of the State House:—

"We notice the painter has been at work on the inside of the State House, whitening it up a little. They should paint all the castings black, and thereby put the miserably constructed rooms in mourning, for the lives of the many good men their ill-yarned and badly ventilated halls have sent to an untimely grave. They should build a new and better State House."

☞ Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer has been elected lord-rector of the Glasgow University by a large majority over Lord Stanley.

related at times by the accidents of war, the casualties of trade and commercial difficulties.

Kossuth on Louis Napoleon.—During some of his recent lectures in Manchester and England, the great Hungarian was very eloquent on "the nephew of his uncle." Very often his expressions of the kind, he used the language in regard to Napoleon the Third, "Sprung up like a toadstool on a swampy place, he could fix no roots in the soil of his country."

Official Vote of Virginia.
Full returns from Virginia, as officially canvassed, show the following result. Buchanan, 89,843; Fillmore, 60,116; Buchanan's majority, 29,727.

time. And He who tempests the wind to throw lamb's wool will aid me." "Very true," said Mrs. Percival had not the slightest objection to such an arrangement, provided she was not called upon to untwist the strings of her purse in the cause.

She sat a few moments apparently in deep thought, and then turning to Sarah, remarked:

"You are probably aware that a city like New York is a dangerous place for a girl as young as you—and as—" she was going to add "beautiful," but checked herself and said "inexperienced," instead. "Why do you think it is so dangerous?—the crowded city and the crowded country, the crowded place and the crowded time, the crowded teaching school and support yourself by your own hands, or something of that kind? This is almost the only respectable situation in which a young girl can establish herself now-a-days. Miss Percival."

her own room, and thought she would struggle so soon to begin, she made a strong and stern resolve—that, come what might, her last words to her aunt and cousin should, at no very distant day, prove true.

CHAPTER III.

On the afternoon of the funeral, when the dead body that had been for three days solemnizing the aspect of the "great house," was laid in its last long home, a little party assembled in the parlour, to hear the reading of the will. It was all over now—the funeral services—the tears—the prayers—and nothing remained but for the living to divide the spoil. A harsh saying it may be, but yet, with one exception, the group that had been embled in that little room justified it.

By the fire-place, stately and magnificent in her deep mourning, sat Mrs. Percival, [illegible]

THE LEOCRATE. This is mere rumor, but could such be the result, it will be an argument fit to be made. In the brief paper that Judge Pettit presided upon the bench, he displayed remarkable administrative and judicial capacity. If Judge Pettit would accept the position, we know of no one who would administer its duties with more ability, impartiality and firmness, and whose conduct would be hailed with equal satisfaction.

POUNCEYLEAVIA is our greatest wheat producer, and is estimated to raise this year 18,000,000 bushels; Ohio is next, raising 16,000,000; New York is next, raising 15,200,000; Illinois next, raising 14,600,000; Wisconsin, 14,000,000; and Virginia raises 12,200,000.

THE NEXT CENSUS—ILLINOIS REPRESENTATION.—According to the vote of November the four Northern Districts of Illinois have more than populous enough to form districts each, thus giving them eight representatives instead of four. The five all and Southern Districts will be entitled to eight. After the next census and apportionment Illinois will certainly have not more than eighteen members of Congress, and possibly more.

A student of medicine in Michigan, who courted a girl a year, and got the mistress turned round and sued her father for the return of the richer.